You See What You Expect to See

You see what you expect to see.

Not what is there.

Not at first.

You bring something with you.

An idea.
A shape.
A meaning.

And it fits.

Until—

it doesn’t.

And then—

you see differently.

You see what you expect to see.